

Automated External Defibrillator Availability in Greater Minnesota

A REPORT TO THE MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE

REPORT TO THE MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE: SURVEY OF AUTOMATED EXTERNAL DEFIBRILLATOR AVAILABILITY IN GREATER MINNESOTA

December 15, 2002

The 2001 Minnesota Legislature requested the Minnesota Emergency Medical Services Regulatory Board (EMSRB) to survey automated external defibrillator (AED) availability in Greater Minnesota. Minnesota Laws 2001, First Special Session, chapter 9, article 17, section 6, requires the Emergency Medical Services Board:

...to study, in consultation with the commissioner of public safety, and report to the legislature by December 15, 2002, regarding the availability of automatic defibrillators outside the seven-county metropolitan area. The report shall include recommendations to make these devices accessible within a reasonable distance through the nonmetropolitan area, including recommendations for funding their acquisition and distribution.

This report sets forth findings of this survey in three key areas of interest to the legislature:

- Availability of AEDs in the 80 counties of Greater Minnesota, located outside the seven-county metropolitan region of Hennepin, Ramsey, Anoka, Carver, Scott, Washington, and Dakota counties;
- Recommendations to make AEDs accessible within a reasonable distance in Greater Minnesota;
- Recommendations on funding the acquisition and distribution of AEDs in Greater Minnesota.

Background Information Regarding AEDs

Sudden cardiac arrest is a major cause of death in the United States, claiming about 220,000 lives each year (2001 Heart and Stroke Statistical Update, American Heart Association, Dallas, Texas). Most sudden cardiac arrest involves a lethal heart arrhythmia known as ventricular fibrillation. Effective treatment for ventricular fibrillation is an electrical shock using a defibrillator. With each minute that elapses, the probability of successful defibrillation is reduced by about 10%. Currently, only about five percent of persons experiencing sudden cardiac arrest survive (American Heart Association, Saving Lives with the Chain of Survival for Cardiac Arrest, 2001). For this reason, early access to defibrillation is an essential element in any emergency medical response system.

The American Heart Association's Chain of Survival metaphor summarizes four essential elements for an effective "early defibrillation" program: early activation of the emergency medical services (EMS) system, early CPR, early defibrillation, and early access to advanced cardiovascular life support care (American Heart Association, ibid.)

The availability of compact, lightweight, fully automated AEDs makes it possible for trained first response personnel, such as fire departments, law enforcement agencies, and ski patrols, to respond to sudden cardiac arrest victims with this life-saving capability. Additionally, placed in locations where access by EMS personnel may be delayed, AEDs can mean the difference between life and death for many experiencing sudden cardiac arrest. Laypersons trained in the use of AEDs, and also bystanders in many situations, can make this difference a reality.

Availability of AEDs in Greater Minnesota

The recipients and target population of this survey were fire departments, law enforcement agencies, and ski patrols throughout Minnesota. A mailing consisting of 1,153 survey instruments was distributed to these emergency responders in the 80 counties comprising Greater Minnesota. This survey instrument (Attachment #1) was developed in consultation with the American Heart Association – Northland Affiliate. After the initial mailing, and follow up effort, a total of 544 surveys were returned. Completed surveys were received from 265 fire departments, 165 police departments, 57 county sheriffs, 31 first responder squads not fire departments or public-safety related, 19 licensed ambulance services, mostly fire department-based services, 5 city government and 2 ski patrols. The rate of return for all surveys was 47%. This rate of return has provided a measure of validity to the survey for purposes of reviewing the results.

Responses were received from all 80 counties in Greater Minnesota. The information received provides a snapshot of AED access and availability for first responder units, the need for additional AEDs, CPR and AED training, and AED placement and need within other agencies and organizations in the counties comprising Greater Minnesota.

AED Survey Results by County (Attachment 2), displays the 80 counties surveyed in Greater Minnesota, with the responses received within these counties from the targeted populations: fire departments, law enforcement agencies, first responders, and other emergency responders. It is important to note that, although responses were received from representative target populations in all 80 counties, the results do not represent all of the possible responses possible from any specific county.

The following points illustrate the results of Attachment 2: AED Survey Results by County:

- Thirty-five percent (191 responses) of the 544 total respondents report no access to AEDs within their agency or organization.
- The sixty-five percent (353 responses) of organizations with AED access report a total of 790 AED units.
- All of the responding target population reports an additional need for 1,175 AED units.
- Eighty-five percent (461 responses) of the responding target population is dispatched by a 911 emergency telephone system within each county; fifteen percent (83 responses) is not dispatched by 911.
- Seventy-three percent (396 responses) of the responding target population reports physician oversight of the AEDs; twenty-seven percent (148 responses) does not have physician oversight.
- The responding target population reports 7,327 persons trained in an American Heart Association CPR course, 4,314 persons trained in an American Heart Association AED Course, and an additional 1,797 persons in need of AED training.

The survey Community AED Placement (Attachment 3) provides further insight from the respondents regarding their perception of AED placement in specific locations, including both emergency responder and community access locations. The survey listed possible locations as fire departments, law enforcement agencies, first responder units, ski patrols, community facilities, local businesses, health care facilities, health clinics, schools, restaurants, and other public gathering places within the 80 counties surveyed.

The following points summarize results from Attachment 3: Community AED Placement:

- The community-based organizations and agencies with the preponderance of AEDs already in place are hospitals, health clinics, physician offices, nursing homes, and public/government facilities.
- Other community-based organizations with some AED access include schools, community centers, local businesses, and assisted living facilities.
- All emergency responders and community-based organizations and agencies report 884 AEDs in place, but suggest a “great need” for 940 additional AEDs and a “future need” of 999 AEDs, with 480 staff in need of AED training.

The attachments to this survey provide detailed information gathered from each of the 80 Greater Minnesota counties on the availability, location, and need for AEDs consistent with the above findings.

Making AEDs Accessible Within a Reasonable Distance in Greater Minnesota

This study illustrates the need and expectation in Greater Minnesota to press forward with the priority of equipping emergency first responders with AED capabilities. The survey results further suggest the need to carry this capability forward for even greater accessibility in other important public locations. It should be noted that licensed ambulance services in Minnesota are required by state law to have ambulance response available 24-hours a day with defibrillation capability, provided by trained emergency medical technicians. Realistically, this life-saving equipment provided by ambulance response in Greater Minnesota must travel greater distances than in more urbanized areas. This results in the ambulance often arriving too late to the scenes of medical emergencies involving cardiac arrest to make a difference in patient outcomes in rural areas of Greater Minnesota.

Following are basic recommendations to make AEDs accessible within a “reasonable distance” in Greater Minnesota:

- Train and equip “first responders” (fire departments, law enforcement agencies, ski patrol, other first responder units in public and private settings) to administer immediate care when needed, including CPR skills and AED usage, and encourage these first responder units to voluntarily register with the Minnesota Emergency Medical Services Regulatory Board (www.emsrb.state.mn.us).
- Encourage county and city local boards of health, and public and private agencies and organizations in Greater Minnesota to advocate for placement of AEDs in public places where cardiac arrests may occur with above-average frequency, such as health care facilities, sports arenas, transportation centers, and other crowded public places and spaces.
- Encourage public and private organizations and agencies to obtain AEDs for public access placement, and train employees and volunteers how to respond to cardiac emergencies with CPR and AED usage skills.
- Greater Minnesota counties should be encouraged to develop a basic plan to evaluate the effectiveness of AED placement programs, including the collection of data, to demonstrate use of AEDs and outcomes for out-of-hospital cardiac arrest survival rates in local communities.

- Greater Minnesota counties should be encouraged to promote public awareness and provide information for public and private community organizations and individuals about AEDs and availability of public access defibrillation programs.
- Minnesota's seven regional EMS systems located in Greater Minnesota provide existing and future potential for assisting local government, and other public and private agencies in local communities in the determination of appropriate AED public access programs (for access to these regional EMS program locations, see the website: www.emsrb.state.mn.us).

Funding the Acquisition and Distribution of AEDs in Greater Minnesota

The results of this survey illustrate the existing and potential need for deliberate expansion of AED placement in Greater Minnesota for first responder organizations as well as public access defibrillation programs. In times of financial constraint, clearly defined fiscal priorities require careful planning and judicious use of funding resources to enhance the benefits AED programs can provide the people of our state. As technology progresses in the development of automated defibrillators, the unit cost continues to drop. For example, AEDs are currently available through state-approved vendor contracts for prices ranging from approximately $2,200 through $2,900 per unit.

Following are recommendations for balancing public need and benefit of AED access programs and the funding for acquisition and distribution of AEDs in Greater Minnesota:

- In 1998, the Minnesota Legislature provided one-time funding ($450,000) for the Commissioner of Public Safety to distribute AEDs to local law enforcement agencies, and to provide training of personnel in the use of these devices. Approximately 150 local law enforcement agencies benefited from this one-time appropriation by the legislature. This policy option should be considered by policy makers for reinstatement, with opportunity for matching funds from local units of government to assure maximum benefit for the purchase of AEDs.
- Alternative funding methodologies should be considered by state policy makers, such as bonding options to finance AED purchase, and/or use of cigarette tax revenue (smoking is a major contributor to heart disease).
- Local units of government, public and private agencies, non-profit agencies, foundations, businesses are encouraged to consider funding of AED units for use by first responder units and public access locations in local communities.
- The United States Department of Health and Human Services, Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) has established through federal legislation a “Rural Access to Emergency Devices Act Grant Program.” In 2002, the EMSRB was awarded first-year grant funding ($257,820) that will assist 38 rural counties in Minnesota through community partnerships of local agencies and organizations in acquiring at least 447 AEDs and training at least 2,440 persons in areas where AEDs are not readily available. The EMSRB will continue to apply for available funds through this federal resource, and encourage local matching funding sources to obtain maximum purchasing power for AEDs and training of personnel. Attachment 4: Minnesota Automated AED Community Partnership and AED Placement Project is attached for further information.

- Stakeholders, including the American Heart Association and the American Red Cross, are encouraged to continue efforts to seek funding for AED public placement programs in Minnesota, as part of national efforts to promote the benefits of early access to defibrillation as a public health goal.

Conclusion

This survey of 80 counties provides a snapshot of AED availability and placement throughout Greater Minnesota. The American Heart Association – Northland Affiliate (telephone number: 952.835.3300) conducted a similar survey of the seven-county metropolitan region in January, 2001. The information gathered from these surveys affirm the need for the Minnesota Emergency Medical Services Regulatory Board, the Minnesota Department of Public Safety, and other state agencies, in collaboration with key stakeholders and partners to continue promotion of public early access to defibrillation throughout the entire state of Minnesota.

The EMSRB, the American Heart Association – Northland Affiliate, and other key stakeholders will continue collaborative efforts for AED placement, access, and training throughout Minnesota. These issues will be brought before governmental agencies, and other policy and planning organizations involved in this effort, so that together we may achieve, within the limits of available resources, maximum public health benefit through placement and availability of this life-saving device.
